

That's the Way the Strysles crumble

Around 2010, guitarist David Lemmer had the idea to start a new musical adventure after years of playing in cover bands, so he founded a new rock band with some friends who have been around in the music scene for a while; the sound influenced by his favourites like Red Hot Chili Peppers, Audioslave, Stereophonics, Alter Bridge just to name a few.

Strysle what?

And there they were sitting together, thinking about a name for the band. It happened that someone brought some "Streisel" to the rehearsal that day, those little pudding-stuffed pastries with a crumbly topping. Yeahhh there it was right in front of them. It's just their orthographic deficiency that led to the unusual spelling.

After the very first concert in 2012 for the birthday concert of "Rockbox", together with "PornQueen", Strysles organized some gigs together with friends like "IRI-NA", "Grey Station", "The Neverminds", "Tuys" or yet "The Barcodes" as well as a big charity event for the Philippines in November 2013.

2015: нов ветер

In the beginning of 2015, Strysles felt the need to renew. What about a new voice? Not easy to find, but very soon, Mrs Elena Kramdi-Drvosanova stepped into the game. Originating from Mace-

After weeks and months of work and with a clear goal in mind, Strysles hit the stu-

2017: Break the Silence

After a few concerts in 2016 to present "Tic Tac", Dan Mangiulli left the band and was replaced by Marc Lanners on guitars. To mark this change, Strysles recorded the Funk-Pop single "Break the Silence" which aired on the radios. Later in 2017 they self-produced a video-clip with an unplugged version of the song for the "My Urban Piano" installations in Luxembourg City and won the 2nd prize given by the "Ville de Luxembourg".

2018: New Album
